On Friday October 7, 2011, when the students of North Boone CUSD were enjoying the day off, the teachers and other staff of North Boone were in classes of their own. The staff were involved in learning about resources to support the Common Core Standards; additional vocabulary and reading interventions, training in a variety of technology resources and some other training. Boone County State's Attorney Michelle Courier spoke on ethics issues. About a dozen North Boone administrators and teachers presented in total.

Reading Specialists Tami Doetch and Tammy O'Toole brought in a group of children to help demonstrate Jolly Phonics instruction.
